SUMMARY:

WADAN plans to target 9,000 students, with each participating district hosting 1,000 students. Out of these 9,000, 60% will be girls (5,400) and 40% will be boys (3,600). The students from the host community will be 20% and 80% will be the returnees. Students with disabilities would be considered 15% in this intervention. WADAN would hire persons with disabilities in the project such as teachers as well as staff based on their capacity and their viewpoints would be considered during the implementation. WADAN will undertake minor rehabilitation activities in 23 public schools, with 16 schools in Nangarhar and 7 in Kunduz. The total number of Temporary Learning Spaces would be 300. Each Temporary Learning Space will have one dedicated teacher and each TLS would have 30 students in it. Therefore, the total number of students would be  $300 \times 30 = 9,000$ . Efforts will be made to recruit female teachers, depending on the need and availability in the area.

Out of 300 TLS teachers 180 of them would be female and 120 would be male. The grades of students will be determined through a comprehensive re-assessment at the beginning of the project, ensuring that each student's educational needs are accurately identified and addressed. The Temporary Learning Spaces would be established in the public schools or in a place which is accessible to all the students. As per the cluster recommendation, tents would be provided for the students to continue their education. Since the students are returnees and most of them are unfamiliar with the local language, specific language classes would be conducted to enhance their understanding of the local languages: Pashto and Dari and other additional learning materials. WADAN would hire a Catch-up classes content developer to fulfill the needs of students.
